

Topological Linking in Liquid Crystals

Randall Kamien (University of Pennsylvania)

Do loops in liquid crystals link? When the fundamental group must be non-abelian for linking in traditional partially ordered systems that can be classified via homotopy theory. Smectic liquid crystals, however, are not straightforward: homotopy fails to properly classify the system's topological defects. How do those loops link?